

Average Intelligence Counterfeiters Buy Brachycephalic Mr. White More About the Dollar
By ARTHUR BRISANE

DURING THE WAR conscripted millions were subjected to "intelligence tests," and you learned, with anxiety, that the adult American has an average intelligence of a twelve-year-old child.

Now, to cheer you, the bureau of education says that it is a mistake. Only about three million adult Americans have twelve-year-old intelligence, not many more than enough to cover all those who think they understand money and know what the government ought to do about it.

Forty million adult Americans have seventeen-year-old intelligence, ten millions average about twenty-three-year-old intelligence.

The question is: What is a twelve-year-old intelligence? At the age of twelve, Newton probably knew more about mathematics, intuitively, than many modern teachers of mathematics know. As for Mr. Mostert at the age of four played well, at seven he composed, and gave concerts at royal courts.

There is no real intelligence standard, and as we are all only 12,000 years from the late Stone Age, what we call "highest intelligence" will seem astonishingly ignorant a few million years hence.

Mr. Brodax, of the United States secret service, reports great activity among manufacturers of counterfeit money. They sell imitation money at forty to twenty cents on the dollar, and many are distributing it. Detective even found one lady with counterfeit bills hidden in her shoe.

An intelligent counterfeit, selling dollars at forty to twenty cents, should hurry, and get rid of his stock before Uncle Sam begins selling real dollars cheaper than the counterfeiters can manufacture and distribute them.

Roy Barton White, the brachycephalic head of the Western Union Company and its 50,000 employees, says: "There was no longer any doubt that the United States is on the upgrade. Intelligence is coming back with a bang."

That is cheerful. Most important, young men who would like to get along in the world is the fact that Mr. White says that intelligence was a high school boy, wondering what he was going to do. When he left his school, the grade point average was around the railroad station in Dana, Ind., not watching the telegraph operator, C. P. Peters, who let him come in and learn.

FIGHTER GOES IN CHAINS TO HELP BROTHER'S DEATH
Young Mother Shot at "Party" Refuses to Implicate Boxer

Manacled to a policeman, Anthony Delmont, 28-year-old boxer, today was taken to Haymarket Relief Hospital to give his blood in a transfusion in an effort to save the life of Mrs. Julia De Vito, young West End divorcee.

She was shot after an early morning drinking party in Delmont's in the absence of his wife and two children, and he is under arrest in connection with the shooting.

While surgeons were seeking to remove a bullet from the young mother's left thigh, the son of the former New England boxing champion was taken to the North at police station. There word reached him that a blood transfusion was being given.

He asked that he be permitted to volunteer for the hospital under police guard so that blood tests might be made.

The manacles which bound him during the test, and even during the transfusion, there was no relaxing of the guard over him. Delmont was taken into custody in a hotel, and police also held Anthony Delmont, 32, disabled war veteran, who has been living with the boxer's son.

SENATE FIGHT NEAR OVER RESTORING WAR VETS' PAY CUTS

REPUBLICANS START DRIVE FOR $80,000,000 A YEAR

Four Point Program of American Legion Presented by Reed and Support From Democrats Sought

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

International News Service Staff Correspondent
Washington, Jan. 27 (INS)—A legislative battle over restoring $80,000,000 in annual benefits to disabled veterans of the World War and their dependents loomed today in the Senate, as Republicans sought Democratic support for liberalizing the national economy act.

Congress appeared ready to authorize a more liberal treatment of the veterans, if President Roosevelt gives his approval or acquiescence. His direct opposition, however, likely will kill the measure, although its proponents have hopes of victory even in the face of presidential disapproval.

REED'S 4-POINT PROGRAM

The program as proposed by Senator Reed (R) of Pennsylvania, a World War major of artillery, included:

- 1.—Restoring all disabled veterans to the service-connected roll who were on the rolls prior to passage of the Economy Act.
- 2.—Restoring the old disability allowances for veterans actually disabled in line of duty.
- 3.—Hospitalization for all veterans, not dishonorably discharged, who are unable to pay for their own treatment.
- 4.—Enactment of a $15 monthly compensation for all widows and orphans of veterans.

Reed offered it as an amendment to the independent office appropriation bill, thus insuring an early vote in the Senate. The Senate Appropriations Committee meanwhile began consideration of the measure. It probably will be reported to the Senate by the end of this week.

AMERICAN LEGION PLAN

The Reed plan was drafted originally by the American Legion. "This is not a fight against the President," said Reed. "It is a fight for justice. It is not a partisan issue. Both Democrats and Republicans will support it in the Senate."

"The negotiations are reasonable and fair," it asserted in the House. Senator McKellar (D) of Tennessee, representing the attitude of administration leaders, said he had not decided whether to support the plan.

"I want to restore veterans' benefits at the earliest possible moment," said McKellar. "I shall vote for this as soon as it can be done safely to the finances of the government."

SLAP FATAL TO RUNAWAY BOY'S STRONG MAN LIMBS FROZEN

London, Jan. 27 (AP)—Gladys Clarke, "Iron Man" of the famous old Vio Theatrical Company, who collapsed when given a friendly slap on the back during a rehearsal of "Orpheus" yesterday, died in a hospital today.

Friends said they believed the unexpected slap caused a shock affecting the actor's heart. A man of great strength, Clarke weighed more than 250 pounds.

Portland, Me., Jan. 27 (INS)—With both arms and legs frozen, Edward Crane, 11-year-old school boy who police said ran away from home yesterday, was found today huddled near a wall half a mile from his home. If he lives his arms and legs will have to be amputated.

ELY'S PARDONS ARE PRAISED BY WARDEN

Aid to Morale, Says Hogsett; Governor Replies to Brooks

The morale of the inmates of state prison has been greatly improved as a result of Gov. Ely's pardoning policy, he was informed in a letter from Warden James L. Hogsett, which he made public on his return from Washington today.

In the interview he replied to the charges of Frank A. Brooks, former chairman of the state parole board, that he had inaugurated a "pardon racket" the day he took office.

Revealing that in his three years of office he had issued 127 pardons, including respites, he said that 68 of the cases were represented by 68 different lawyers and that 55 were granted pardons without the aid of counsel.

"I don't see how you can make a racket out of that," he commented. "If anybody places any importance upon my acts all I have to say is that I have the list of the 127 lawyers."

Despite the insistence of the reporters that he make the list public, Gov. Ely refused.

"Over a rather long period when there were few or no pardons granted there was a great deal of unrest among the inmates," stated the warden.

"Your policy of pardoning has greatly improved the morale of the whole institution and my work has been infinitely eased and another on account of these pardons."

WITH BROOKS' APPROVAL
The governor pointed out that in his first year on office he granted 33 pardons, two of which were respites, and that Brooks had approved all save four.

Three were pardons on parole conditions and three received commutations. Of the three full pardons two were in cases of men having been paroled many years, he said.

Out of the list of 127, he was approved by the parole board and four by Brooks, with his colleague dissenting.

'Fay and Leon Hours Together,' Says Rudy

Not were the troubles so far from Rudy's mind. Both of them sat in the singer's office in 57th st. after their arrival and went over the whole controversy between him and Fay Webb Vallee, his wife.

Vallee sighed: "My marriage cost me a lot of money."

The lawyer, Hyman Rubel, said "Didn't I tell you, the whole thing is a big slickup."

Vallee mentioned Gary Leon, famous dancer, and said he would have much more to say about him when the courts get around to hearing about it.

Rudy Rubel said somebody would jump out of the window if records of certain telephone conversations between Leon and Mrs. Vallee ever were made public.

"I don't think it ever happened," echoed Vallee solemnly. "Somebody would jump out of the window."

It was revealed that the crooner didn't really get mad until he returned from an engagement in Delaware on March 31, 1933—"the day before All Fool's Day"—and was informed that his wife had spent two hours in dressing-room with Gary Leon while "The Sign of the Cross" flickered on the silver screen.

"It was the stress that broke the camel's back," he said. "Then I called her father (the chief of police at Santa Monica, Cal.) and told him to come and help us reach a separation agreement."

WILL PRESS-AGENTED
Vallee and his lawyer arrived at the Grand Central station in the midst of a storm. There was a hand. There were girls dressed in what purported to be college sweaters with letters on them. There was also a press agent and the whole outfit came from the restaurant at which Rudy is going to croon.

At the interview there was exhibited a copy of a letter which Mrs. Vallee is alleged to have written to Leah Rudy revealing for the first time how recordings of the telephone conversations were made.

His brother, William, he said, hid in a maid's room and held the receiver of a secret extension telephone to a recording device.

ALL VERY LEGITIMATE
"There wasn't any wire tapping or anything like that," he said. "It was legitimate extension telephone."

The singer was pained because his wife had applied to a California court yesterday for $7500 a month maintenance.

"It's outrageous," he said. He paused a moment for that to take effect, and went on:

BLACK SWINGS SUPPORT TO ROOSEVELT

Opposition to Gold Plan Silenced by U. S. Bank Head

Washington, Jan. 27 (INS)—Congressional opposition to President Roosevelt's monetary policy appeared to be fading rapidly today.

There will be minor delays over procedure and because of hearings granted by the Senate banking committee, but the prospects for any real or formidable opposition appeared dim.

Those like Senator Carter Glass (D) of Virginia, a former secretary of the treasury, who are strictly against the program, admit the futility of making a fight.

GLASS GIVES UP
Glass and Senator McAdoo (D) of California, also a former Secretary of the Treasury, joined in demanding that Alty-Glen Cummings submit a written opinion on the constitutionality of the government's taking title to all the monetary gold.

Support of the administration's program by Gov. Eugene H. Black of the Federal Reserve Board seemed to take all of the heart out of the opposition. Black disclosed that the Federal Reserve Board agreed with Mr. Roosevelt that the profit from reselling the dollar at from 50 to 60 per cent should go to the government itself and not to the reserve banks which now hold the gold.

BOTH SIDES SATISFIED
As matters stood today, Mr. Roosevelt appeared to have accomplished the seemingly impossible task of reasonably satisfying both sides on the money question. The inflationists were partially satisfied because they felt the President's move was a step in the right direction; the "hard money" advocates were relieved that in this new policy there is no res to printing press money.

Washington, Jan. 27—As a matter of principle, President Roosevelt disapproves of those holding important party office practicing law before government departments, he said today at his press conference in reply to a question. The statement obviously had reference to a number of Democratic National Committee and other party officers who since the change of administration have come to Washington and engaged in law practice and lobbying suggesting backdoor entries to the White House.

cause she accused him of the Matheson killing.

The Scotts have been living here, the home of both, since a year ago October, when they moved from Boston.

SHOOTING FEARED

Mrs. Scott could not remember the exact night of the murder, January 13, 1927, the time 5:30 p. m., as she said Scott arrived home regularly during that period between 6 and 8:15.

The shooting incident occurred here during the summer of 1928 when they returned for a visit. She feared she was to be shot but he finally allowed her to run into a nearby hunting camp. She finally stated that she was examined by two local doctors. They will be questioned.

Capt. Flaherty said he learned that certain property owned by Scott was transferred to his wife's name shortly after the Matheson murder. "This is important to me," he said.

POLICE SECRETIVE

Mrs. Scott said she lived at 1 Bird ave., West Roxbury, before they lived together at 3 Richmond st., West Roxbury, or 11 Summit st., West Roxbury, in Holmwood ave., and 206 Clarence st., Dudley street, Malden, and 114 Walnut st., Boston.

Tiny Kansan Wins Debut Chance When Talley Balks

Chicago, Jan. 17 (AP)—Rose Marie Brancato, a demure play of 8, will make her debut in a grand opera tonight.

A tiny child's refusal by Marion Talley to agree to terms for a second appearance here gave her fellow townsman her chance and the 21-year-old coloratura soprano confounded her evident shyness.

"She is the youngest singer I have ever heard of and she is not frightened by the prospect of facing 2500 patrons in the ornate Civic Opera auditorium. The house is said to be for the performance, the management said."

"I have been singing since I was seven years old," she said at the first press conference she ever gave, "and as a child I once sang before about two thousand persons in Kansas City. At Rochester, N. Y., where I was with the local opera company, they had quite large audiences, too. And I sang for a week at Radio City. I am not a bit frightened and I expect to sing my three regular meals today. One needs strength."

"But I have some regret about tonight. I had hoped my family would come to see me singing here and that it would be a surprise to them. Now it has been in the papers and they will be so excited. That's not good."

SLUM REMOVAL TRACK CLEAR

Washington, Jan. 17 (AP)—A solution of legal difficulties over the housing corporation's $100,000,000 slum clearance program today appeared as President Roosevelt called for the bill to be passed. The bill would allow the government to take over the slum areas without compensation. At the same time Comptroller McCarry made public his communication to Secretary Jones which caused the latter to charge that McCarry had blocked the housing program.

In it McCarry questioned the legality of the housing corporation, set up under federal direction, but he left the way open for further negotiation.

The communication apparently bore out McCarry's contention that he was to take over the slum areas without compensation. The latter at first seemed to have been interpreted in this way.

CORDILL HULL FLAYS WAR

Panama City, Jan. 17 (AP)—Cordell Hull, Secretary of State of the United States, condemned war today as "nothing less than murder and assassination."

He had arrived aboard the SS Santa Barbara, concluding a good will tour of Latin America.

Hull asserted that the nations of America, by wholesale adherence to their pasts providing for a peaceful settlement of disputes, had made possible the civilization of the fact that "peace can no longer be catalogued as a mere term of diplomacy."

The secretary said "this gospel" now he carries "to the utmost parts of our lands."

He paid a visit to the President Harmodio Araya of Panama, expected to board the U. S. cruiser Richmond at Cristobal later.

Brighton, Allston Crime Deplored

Rep. Martin Hays of Brighton, in an open letter today to Police Comm. Fullman, charged Boston 14 is undermined and that "deplorable" conditions exist in Brighton and Allston.

"Crime and violence occur not only in residential streets but in main thoroughfares," he wrote. "Men, women and children are in constant fear for their safety and business men are continuously apprehensive of being held up."

JAPANESE DIPLOMAT CREATES NEW PANAMA CANAL IS BLASTED

U. S. S. Oklahoma Goes to Doom in War Tale of Japanese Pamphlet as Fleet Scurries to Protect Pacific Coast

Heretofore, the Boston Evening American publishes the second installment of the violently suggestive and sensational "variance of the Japanese-United States future war," of which 1210 copies were seized at Honolulu, Hawaii, before they could be distributed to the people there.

The books were held as seditious and inflammatory. The Boston Evening American published the first installment of this first translation of the handbook of sabotage designed as a "novel," yesterday, in that installment the war is begun by a Japanese naval lieutenant, Eitara Maki, first two torpedoes from his destroyer, the Nara, into the U. S. S. Houston, flagship of our Asiatic fleet.

Maki is tried by court-martial and sentenced to be shot, but after the firing squad misses him three times, is released and ordered by the Japanese to go to the United States. The governments of the two countries fall, and war is declared by the new administration. From Darwin, on the continent of Asia, Maki sends a radio telegram to the United States, telling the Japanese navy, but now wants to re-visit.

After he left the home of the radio owner, the Japanese repair man in Dairen, rushed home to tell his wife the news. He decides, knowing what he knows, that since war is inevitable, he is going back to Tokyo. He reveals to her that he was once a first class sailor in the very ship that torpedoed the Houston.

When the ship, the Nara, was tied up at Yokohama, years before, he told his wife, he received news that his aged mother was ill. He asked for leave to go to her bedside, but was refused because the ship was about to be sent to sea. The despairing sailor received a message saying that his mother was dead, when the vessel arrived at Dairen. He was an stricken with grief and rage at having been denied a last visit to her, that he decided.

But now that war is declared, he explains, he must go to the color. In the end, he leaves his wife, and finds himself back aboard the Nara, with Lt. Maki. Maki, where there was dead, may have great adventures together, and find a touching connection with each other. But that comes later.

That Which Hides in the Lion's Body

Fortunately for Japan, when war was declared, the greater portion of the United States battle fleet was in the Atlantic Ocean. To which the battle fleet is scheduled to return this spring.

There is a revolution on in Cuba and the fleet is doing duty off the Cuban coast to keep American lives and property safe. But when the war is declared, the army is sent to Cuba and the navy ordered back to the Pacific.

As the ships from line off the Atlantic side of the Panama Canal for transfer through to the Pacific side, Capt. Ward, commander of the flagship, Monterey, calls his aide to him for a discussion of the coming affairs. They agree that the Japanese submarines supposedly hiding off the coast are not so small to do much damage, and everybody is watching out for themselves.

Messboy Plots End of U. S. Battleship

U. S. planes are on duty to guard against Jap air attacks expected from the hidden forces in Costa Rica, Colombia, and the republic of Panama. The captain and his crew agree that everything seems safe, as they do not believe the Japanese battle fleet can reach the Pacific Coast by the time they can get their own forces through the Canal.

But the captain reckons without the Negro who is supposed to have directed the ship at Havana (United States vessels have Filipino mess boys). While the captain is discussing his safety with his officer, the Negro slips into his cabin, and reads that the ship will pass through the Canal in 10 days, and disappears from view.

The next morning when the Oklahoma is within the concrete walls of the lock, being towed through the lake beyond, there is a terrific explosion. The walls crumble and the mountain slides down into the water. Both the ship and the canal are wrecked, and it is months before there is a way through again.

The President of the United States issues an order that no Negro may become a soldier of the United States, thereby cutting down on the force.

The next scene of war lies in the bay at San Francisco, off Mare Island.

Diamond of 726 Carats Is Found

Capetown, Jan. 17 (INS)—A huge white diamond, flawless and weighing 726 carats and believed to be the fourth largest in the world, was found today at Standfontein, 20 miles north of Pretoria.

It is believed possible that the gem is part of the great Cullinan diamond, the largest ever discovered, which is now among the crown jewels of England.

The finder, J. J. Jonker, refused an immediate offer of 75,000 pounds sterling for the gem ($131,000 at the prevailing rate of exchange).

A few days ago a flawless diamond weighing 500 carats was found nearby. The spot where both were discovered is only three miles from the place where the Cullinan, which weighed 3,106 carats in its original state, was found.

Diamond experts were keenly interested in the possibility that both stones might have originally been part of the Cullinan.

When the Cullinan was found immediate inspection showed that one of its faces bore all the marks of a clean fracture, leading to the belief that, despite its tremendous size, it was in reality only part of a much larger stone.

MAE PREFERS ROSE TO GEM LOOT

Los Angeles, Jan. 17.—Mae West movie siren, was more concerned with the horrors of a broken nose and the possible loss of a screen contract than with the $2000 in cash and the $12,000 in jewelry she gave up when a robber held her up September 28, 1932.

Testifying in the trial of Edward Friedman, who is charged with the robbery, the actress said she knew she could earn back the money, but a "new face" was something else again.

Miss West was robbed while sitting in the auto of Harry Volter, now fighting extradition from Illinois as a defendant in the case.

Showing Miss West a photograph of Friedman striped to the waist, Defense Atty. Clarke asked:

"Do you know whether he had this bruise on his abdomen before the officers arrested him?"

Miss West replied:

"Good night, no," she said, "I only saw his face."

Sweeping out of the courtroom during a recess, the actress asked adjacent spectators:

"How'm I doin', boys?"

"They gave her a brick round of rplian."

Death Takes Bishop McMurray, St. Louis

St. Louis, Jan. 17.—Bishop William Fletcher McMurray, 68, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, south, died in Barnes Hospital here today of heart disease, resulting from an attack of influenza.

Bishop McMurray lived at Fayette, Mo., seat of Central College, where he served as president for two years ago. He was president of the church's board of finance with headquarters here.

Miss West in Los Angeles court just before the robbery spectators "How'm I doin', boys?" as a witness in the trial of man accused of robbing her. A great, big "hands" was the answer. (L. N. P.)

Human Side of the News; The Chaos in Asia By Edwin C. Hill

Fair words come out of Russia, Italy, England and France, and even the truculent Hitler modifies his tone and bearing. The little "war" down in South America seems a half, exhausted thing, for the time. Revolutions are out of style, for the moment. The harried dove of peace is able to alight and rest her feet, however briefly.

And on both sides of the Atlantic, along with the feeling that peace seems a little surer, goes the kindling expectation of better times, with civilization getting on its feet again.

But it all this is true of the Western World, it mostly agrees to throw into sharper, harsher contrast the utter chaos of the Eastern World; the decline of the power and prestige of the white race; the ruin and prostrate China, and the desperation of the Japanese in their plain struggle for existence. Only a generation ago, as Lord Rothamstead remarks in "The Rising Tide of Color," the white man was the undisputed master of the East.

POWER IN EAST

But in the East, power rests on a shaky pedestal. The Chinese call it "face." When Japan defeated Russia in the Russo-Japanese war, it was a heavy blow. When the Great War came and the white race embarked upon a kind of collective suicide, all that remained of the white man's prestige was shattered. Ever since the Great War the white man has been in retreat from the Far East; a moral retreat, as Mr. Stoddard points out, a relinquishment of political control—in India, in the Philippines, in the Dutch Indies and elsewhere.

So far it has been orderly. At any time, with the rising tide of communism in China, it may become a rout.

All this might have been prevented if hard times and national internal troubles had not made it impossible for the nations that had the biggest stake in the East to employ strong measures to maintain their authority and their "face." But they did not. The old Orient had gone never to return. It has become westernized, and all over the East social unrest echoes demands for a higher standard of living.

Japan has been westernizing herself for three-quarters of a century. Old Japan has almost vanished. As Dr. Stoddard says, the cherry blossoms are smothered with the soot of factory chimneys and winter in the fumes belched from blast furnaces. The new Japan is the one that disciplined people in all the present anarchy of Asia, the only nation capable of supporting and defending a civilization acceptable and amiable to the white man's prestige tarnished.

If disciplined Japan finds it hard to keep her balance, think how much harder it must be for the other Asiatic peoples. China shows what may happen to many Eastern lands, now that the power of the white man is shaken and his prestige tarnished.

The revolution which overthrew the Manchu dynasty twenty years ago, and turned an old-fashioned Oriental Empire into a so-called re-

TRIPLE PLAY IS AND TO BURKE

On the afternoon of the day he is alleged to have snatched $24,000 in tickets, early in South Boston, Daniel J. Burke of Columbus ave., South End, calmly went to a ball game at Braves Field and saw a triple play, while witnesses testified for him today in superior court.

Testimony was completed before noon, with a possibility that the jury might begin deliberations before midnight. Burke did not take the stand.

Charles J. Meagher of 2974 Washington st., Roxbury, a dentist, who said he had known Burke six years, testified he met him in a Roxbury luncheon at 9:30 a. m. on the day of the theft, Sept. 14, 1932, and that another friend, Jeremiah Sullivan, of Roxbury, joined them.

The prosecution contends, however, that the theft occurred at 8:30 a. m.

Again at noon Meagher met Burke in the same luncheon, and after eating they attended the Braves-Reds game. Asked if he recalled how the triple was made, Meagher said there were Pikes on first and second, with none out, when a Pirate batter slung a line drive to Ubrinski at short. Ubrinski stepped on second and whiffed the ball to Jordan at first, trapping both runners and retiring the side.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Daniel J. Gillen asked Meagher one question:

Q.—The first time you saw the defendant was at 10 that morning, is that right?

A.—Yes.

Sullivan corroborated Meagher's testimony, and Miss Harriet Shaw, a lodger at Burke's Columbus ave. address, corroborated testimony of Daniel Harbison, the land lady that Burke had been in the house until 9 a. m. on the day of the theft.

Schrafft Heiress Is Barred as Fascist

(Special Service Social Workers)

Rome, Jan. 17.—Eight young American opera aspirants, including Kathryn Schrafft, Winchester, Mass., candy heiress, and Bruce King, who were scheduled to be appointed today when they were suddenly refused admission into the regular Fascist student organization "Gruppo Universitario Fascista."

In order to spur their careers in the field of Italy's top musical and stage talent, the opera singers applied for enrollment in the regular Fascist student organization.

When the students heard the announcement they protested vociferously. Miss Schrafft, 27, and King, 26, had brought flowers to place on the shrine of a Fascist martyr. Del Giovanni remained adamant, but finally agreed to forward their applications to Rome headquarters.

The matter may reach Premier Mussolini himself.

While the cases were given by Del Giovanni that opera students could not be admitted to the elite student university, it was generally believed that the motive was really linked to the ban on foreign musical activity.

Besides Miss Schrafft and Bruce, who is the son of the wealthy owner of the Gramercy ranch near Houston, Tex., the group includes Della Benning of Milwaukee, who followed them.

M'CORMICK ART GETS $28,000

Chicago, Jan. 17 (AP).—Mrs. Ella Dyer Hubbard came back to her childhood home, the castle-like landmark on Lake Shore Drive, and dominated the auction of the personal property of her mother, the late Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, from whom she inherited the estate.

The auctioneer's coxswain "What am I bid?" realized an estimated $28,000. Mrs. Hubbard, the former Muriel McCormick, lived in the castle for many years, and the late Mrs. Hubbard lived in the castle for many years.

The highest bid was by Mrs. Hubbard, $1300 for a magnificent Renaissance tapestry that the auctioneer said originally cost more than $10,000.

She also had an animal sculpture in the form of a lion, which she had bought in 1910.

TRAPPED PAIR FACE GRILL

Holyoke, Jan. 17.—Trapped in a garage by 12 policemen, two men giving New York city addresses and believed to be responsible for a number of recent robberies in this section, are under arrest after a gun battle, in which one of them was wounded.

The two men had taken the car to the garage for repairs. The garage men found it contained guns and ammunition and notified police. Officers secreted themselves in the garage.

When the two men returned to the garage they were surrounded. As one drew his weapon, several of the officers also fired, and one of their shots hit the suspect in the arm.

The two men were being grilled about the daylight holdup of the Crocker National Bank at Turners Falls a few weeks ago in which the bandits escaped with $25,000.

PEGGY BLAKE, DEBUTANTE DAUGHTER of Mr. and Mrs. William O. Blake of 414 Beacon st. and Barbara Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John I. Taylor of West st., Dedham, will have a presentation party together at the Blake residence in town at a dance on February 7.

A group of well known women gathered at the Ritz-Carlton yesterday afternoon to attend the tea given by Paul D. Rust, Jr., for her newly formed committee and others actively interested in the President's Birthday Ball.

The date of the ball is Tuesday evening, January 30, President Franklin D. Roosevelt's birthday, and it will be held at the Hotel Statler, who have generously donated the use of the Imperial ballroom for the occasion. Over five thousand tickets have been printed and it is hoped that it will be the most brilliant ball of the season, with the high officials, army and navy, society, professionals, and people in every walk of life attending.

On that date balls will be held in over 5000 cities all over the country in a nationwide effort to endow Georgia Warm Springs Foundation for the relief of infantile paralysis for those who can pay part or not at all for such care.

Smartly Attired in Black

MRS. ROBERT HERRICK, JR. was another very smartly attired matron in severe black which set off her clear, creamy skin. Her milk coat was very rich and elegant, worn with a black velvet beret.

Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, chairman, arrived in black broad-tail to find that Mrs. Paul Rust, Jr., had things in very hand and was competent to handle the necessary arrangements, such as forming committees for the sale of tickets, and arranging with the various theaters for the talent for a stupendous floor show on the night of the dance.

During the evening, when the ball is at its height, a radio message will be received from President Roosevelt thanking the citizens of the republic for their generous response to his appeal and expressing his gratitude for their honoring his birthday in such a fitting way. We are sure everyone will want to show their appreciation of our President's gallant fight for health and their admiration for his splendid program by purchasing a ticket to the ball.

Others noted in the throng yesterday were Mrs. Frederick W. Mansfield, our new mayor's wife, in bright light blue crepe. You will be interested to know that she is a very warm-hearted and gracious lady to meet, the motherly type, with deep, understanding eyes, with easy, quiet manners.

Mrs. Ransom Hodges in Grey Ensemble

MISS MARY CURLEY, daughter of our beloved ex-mayor, listened intently to the speakers with attractive Mrs. Stanton White, who wore a sporty leopard coat. Youthful Mrs. Ransom Fuller Hodges was pretty in grey ensemble and Margaret Emerson's black and green costume was very chic.

It was nice to greet Mrs. Edwin Caves (Louise Fessenden) who has recently returned from her wedding trip to Bermuda. Her hunter's green coat trimmed with beaver and jaunty hat were the last word in chic.

Mrs. Storor Ware contributed as much, if not more, than anyone at the tea in the way of real assistance. She offered to form committees in Dedham, Dover and Westwood to help the sale of tickets. You can always tell the real workers when you get a group of women together. Some are always giving suggestions, and willing to give the names of others who will assist, but there are few who stand up and say, "I will do this, or that," and carry it through. What the women at the tea are going to do was still a mystery at the end of the meeting.

Met Miss Katherine Donnelly and her sister, Miss Mayline, in the lobby. Charming girls and we sent our New Year's greetings to their lovely mother, Mrs. Edward Donnelly. Katherine is one of those chosen to sell sport goods at Jay's next Monday for the benefit of the Emergency Campaign of 1934.

Among the members of the Junior League and their friends who have availed themselves of this splendid opportunity to become more familiar with the music played by the Symphony Orchestra are Mrs. George H. Waterman, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. P. S. Moseley, Mrs. Chilton Cabot, Mrs. James Thayer, Miss Anne Warren, Miss Seria Bartlett, Miss Harriet Mosley, Mrs. Lewis Bell, Mrs. George Upson, Mrs. Albert Rice, Mrs. George P. Tomorrow's lecture will be a varied and interesting one covering works of Purcell, Beethoven, Mozart, Elgar, Strauss, and Lali.

The Junior League book drive is well under way. Ten girls left the Junior League Monday with about 60 postcards that had been mailed to the league, stopping at houses on Beacon st., going out to Cambridge and Brookline, and then taking all books collected, to Mr. Polson at the dispatch office at the Boston Public Library. Ninety hundred and thirty books were turned in Monday afternoon.

Mrs. George H. Waterman and Mrs. Theodore C. Bremer have helped with the collecting in Brookline, and Mrs. Henry Howard, the president of the American Merchant Marine Library Association, has greatly helped the committee, during her short visit to Boston.

Mrs. Charles Bruen Perkins and Mrs. Robert Wilcox Sayles invite you to come to The Children's Museum of Boston this afternoon at 3 o'clock to hear about the emergency campaign of 1934 and to see the work of the museum. Mrs. William H. Brown will be the speaker.

PLANS ARE GOING FORWARD with a gusto for the Black and White ball that those two charming young ladies of Brookline are planning, namely, Priscilla Phelan and Martha Chapin. The girls are kept busy from morning to night with the many details that spell success for their venture.

The hostesses, of whom Mrs. James Phelan and Mrs. John Chapin will be among those present are requested to wear black and white. Whether the guests will appear in black and white regalia we do not know. But of course, black and white is always a supreme background for colorful gowns. The proceeds will go to The North Shore Babies Hospital.

It ought to be a great party, because the people engaged in working for it are those who have the knack to put the thing over with flying colors. Jane Smith and And exceedingly attractive she looked the other night in a gorgeous white lace evening gown with the modish long sleeve and low back. Somehow she looks like a great party.

Tokugawa, the Japanese minister to Canada, and the latter's daughter, Miss Tora Tokugawa, will have a full social program during their two-day visit to Boston. They will be the house guests of Mr. W. Cameron Forbes at The Gay Farm in Newwood.

A luncheon has been arranged by Gay Farm at the Copley-Plaza on Thursday for the Prince, while Miss Grace Nichols entertains at luncheon for Miss Tokugawa. That afternoon Mrs. James S. Russell will give a tea at her home in their honor followed by a dinner party at the home of Mr. C. C. Crutcher of Jamaica Plain. The Japan Society will be hosts to the visitors at a reception at the home of Miss Rose Deane, 400 Beacon st., Thursday evening.

On Friday Mrs. Waldo Forbes will have a luncheon at the Union Club. Following these luncheons the party will be guests at a tea at the Elm House, of which Prof. Roger Merriman is host, and at dinner at Mr. Forbes.

This Is Life
By Robert E. Rogers

THE DRYS are developing considerable resourcefulness, now that they have been thrown back to their second line of defense. For a while after civilization ended for them on December 1, they had to be content with smiling politely and suggesting that Repeal was really only a part of a deep-laid plan of theirs to make us realize the value of all we lost when the country went wet again. They prophesied that within a few years Prohibition would be restored by acclamation.

Since that didn't seem to make much impression on a country busily engaged to find something drinkable and the proper glassware to drink it, they have of late taken to new tactics. They have remembered that education was always one of the basic methods of enlightenment. While they had the whip hand, it is true, they inclined more to coercion than education, but now that coercion is less possible, even in the dry belt, they remember their former goals and are loudly insisting that the old laws making education in temperance compulsory be dusted off and put into effect in the public schools.

Majority More Realistic

IT MAY BE THAT a few of them still have hopes of some kind of miracle by which a case might reach the Supreme Court questioning the legality of Repeal. The majority are more realistic.

Take, for instance, a proposal made by the superintendent of the New York Anti-Saloon League, Fred A. Victor. He suggests filling a bill making it mandatory that every container of alcoholic alcohol be labeled as a "dangerous, habit-forming narcotic or drug." Absurd as that may seem, we can see how it might be effective. Pure Food and Drugs Act were ever to be enacted substantially as written, and if there were to be a sane Secretary of Agriculture, the proposition might be turned from a rather bad joke into a monstrous reality.

Mr. Victor also suggests mandatory legislation compelling public health agencies "to fight alcoholic addiction as they would fight typhoid and diphtheria." By "admission" he takes it that the Federal Government has the habit of taking a drink occasionally.

Still Evade Facts

ALL THIS is interesting, because it shows that the Drys have not got over their old habits of not facing the facts. They have not learned that the American people are sick and tired of coercion in sumptuary matters, and still believe that the most effective method of curing them is by the heavy tread, the big stick and the hand-cuff.

There are certain difficulties, however, in their way. The dry is gone when most of the public school children are in temperance education with fervor, because they were convinced themselves of the absolute truth of the required propaganda. Dryness is gone when the teachers took gags as seriously as the ignorant and impressed pupils take high school half truths about the nature of alcohol and nicotine and those highly colored pictures of the drunkard's liver that made much impressive decoration on the school walls.

One Blessing

PROHIBITION brought us, among other things, one considerable blessing in the form of temperate and scientific corrections to the public school propaganda. Temperate and temperate statements that had for a generation and more been taught to our children, as if they were the most valuable and more impressive and important than the truths of the gospel. I imagine that in the future the public school propaganda will turn the schools over to the tender education of the parents. Public schools will have a good deal of well-informed but impatient opposition from people who realize that the public school and what they have learned since.

Meanwhile the U. S. government, realizing that the people must be taken as soon as possible out of the clutches of the liquor trust, with its impure and fake liquor, its high prices and its old arrogant disregard of the public will, is moving with surprising swiftness to render our people independent of the local booze bosses.

Increased Quotas

THE NEW LIQUOR quotas of European countries are being increased substantially. Already American treaty liquors are being admitted freely from Canada and the West Indies. In addition it has just been announced that the liquor quotas now existing will be raised. France's quota will be doubled, Ireland's raised from 70,000 gallons to 210,000 gallons. France and Great Britain will each be allowed to import an additional 300 per cent increase in their exports to us. This is to take effect almost immediately.

Apparently the government can see no other way of warning our own manufacturers and distributors that they have to play ball with the administration and the people. Obviously it is perfectly possible to drown them out with the old sound, pure, reasonably priced and available imports. Whatever else we can do, the government—once it gets going it moves.

Apparently Mr. Roosevelt does not believe that liquor is a narcotic or a habit-forming drug.

Behind the Doctor
By Aldous Huxley

LONDON—In his latest book, "The Moon and the Medicine" (Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York), Dr. H. W. Haggard makes some very interesting and suggestive remarks about the relations existing between medicine as it is practiced today and the other sciences and useful arts.

The application of the sciences of chemistry, physics and mathematics in the field of invention produced the industrial revolution. These same basic sciences applied to the problems of medicine have yielded much of the modern advancement in this field. But the relation does not end there. The development of industry and the development of modern medical practice have in turn reacted upon each other. It has been through the aid of industry that many of the life-saving measures of modern therapy have become practical realities.

Dr. Haggard illustrates this point by the following example: "A research worker in one of the great universities or hospitals finds a chemical compound, a vaccine or an anti-toxin which is beneficial in preventing or curing disease, but this discovery remains only of academic interest, unless the product can be made readily available to the practicing physician. Neither the physician nor the dispensing pharmacist is likely to prepare the product, unless it is in the research worker's position to manufacture and distribute it. At this point the manufacturing chemist, distributing through the dispensing pharmacist, steps in and supplies the indispensable link between the research worker and the one hand and the practicing physician on the other. The chemist has contributed to make medical advancement possible and practical."

DRUGS are but one of the many weapons used by the modern doctor in his battle against disease. He also possesses a whole army of machines for acting on the body by purely physical means. These machines have to be manufactured in elaborate plants, by highly trained technicians. Diathermy, X-rays, ultra-violet light—these are the modern weapons of the medical profession. Their existence and availability are due to a small army of scientific research workers, of trained metallurgists and electricians and engineers, of expert managers and accountants and, finally, of the public school teachers who teach the required propaganda that dryness is good.

In the past, these available collaborators were very few. The surgeon, it is true, had to apply the cure for his patients' ailments and the physician depended on the herbalist for his drugs. But in the main, doctoring was a one-man job. Which is one of the reasons why its death rate was so unpleasantly high.

INCREASED knowledge has made necessary and inevitable a greater number of individuals. This is true not only of the medical profession, but of every human activity involving the application of science. The more we know and the more we apply our knowledge to the activities of life, the more we inevitably become. Men still depend on enormous amounts of their energy in fighting or preparing to fight. But, inexorably, vast impersonal forces are driving greater and greater numbers of would-be combatants into a condition of reciprocal dependence.

People have lost one another, but the circumstances of the modern world are such that they can do without one another.

OFFER his travels take him to cities whose modernity seems quite incongruous with their geographical positions on the map of civilization. Coming from the wilds of Borneo, for instance, into the city of Paris, he is struck by the contrast. As Sandakan, made Mr. Sinclair gasp in surprise.

Mr. Sinclair's picture is of a sometimes ridiculous, sometimes insane South Sea area, clinging to its paganism and its superstitions desperately, and trying to digest the fantastic Western modes which have been imposed upon it. "Cannibals in tuxedo suits. Naked native girls wearing Woolworth jewelry. These are his symbols. The only subject requires better writing than he gives to it."

Reading and Writing
By William Soskin

GORDON SINCLAIR is a tough tourist, so hard boiled he probably can eat cannibals. Other travelers may be awed by the mystic rites and the blood hunt songs of the jungle. To young Mr. Sinclair it's all a gag. He wise cracked his way through Gandhi's land in "Foot-Loose in India." Now he mingles with the vampires and human steak eaters of New Guinea, and joins the perpetual nudist party in Papua and sticks his impertinent nose into the private affairs of the wild men of Borneo. "Cannibal Quest" is the title of Mr. Sinclair's latest account of curious travel.

Take Bali. Bali has become the Coney Island of the South Sea and Asian tourist world, to judge by the news reels and the travel posters. Commu-pu or Bali, has become the slogan of hordes of travelers. Writers by the score compose rhapsodic descriptions of its temple shrines, its carvings and its willowy, bronzed women. Mr. Sinclair finds it a pleasant dream, too, until Hart's mooning. He's of the school kind, and rough on beauty. He peeks into the Bali houses and in there he finds corpses. Dead brothers and sisters are kept in them, he says, for ten or twenty or even forty years. It is a terrible thing, but the family may be buried in the proper sequence.

One Has a Human Chop

AS a matter of fact I have important reading for you. It's a book for the young man's writing of his knockabout travel. It seems to me the ultimately brain tourist. He achieves his effects by the most contemptuous of means. He is the most glibly vaudeville at other people's expense. Anthropology is nothing to him.

When I was a child I was often told that the world was a very big place and that the world was a very big place and that the world was a very big place.

Willie Seashook, another dealer in foreign sensations, recently wrote of his own cannibalistic experiences in Africa. Mr. Seashook ate a human leg, I believe, and described every sensation involved in painstaking detail. Mr. Sinclair shoots short of that.

Wives Are Real Busy

"CANNIBAL QUEST" is not precisely a book for squeamish appetites. Here are a few of the cold and dead of information typical in the pages of the book. In the highlands of the Iririvady basin, the natives are considered beautiful. The women of the Shan and Kachin tribes have a half dozen husbands each, with a number of brothers sharing the same wife.

Item. In New Guinea mesmerized men die from the influence of an evil eye directed their way by Abasia, the magic eye of the natives. Mr. Sinclair, like Mr. Seashook, and a number of other travel writers, relate the local legends and superstitions with a dramatic suggestion of their possible truth. Mystic is one word for it.

Item. Natives go fishing by sinking a piece of the tina vine into the water. That paralyzes the fish and they come flustering deliberately, sleekly to the surface.

Item. New Guinea has no man eaters except the crocodile; but it has armies of small puncturers and blood suckers, vampire mosquitoes, fierce mosquitoes and leeches.

Nice Bots-and-Clubs

FOR all his comic high-jinks, Mr. Sinclair is quite successful in sustaining a note of menace throughout his story. His descriptions of the bats, for example, with their six-foot wings, their bodies slightly smaller than a cat's, their faces like a pug dog's with sharp black ears and their faces resembling a porcupine, is not exactly a reassuring portrait.

Offers his travels take him to cities whose modernity seems quite incongruous with their geographical positions on the map of civilization. Coming from the wilds of Borneo, for instance, into the city of Paris, he is struck by the contrast. As Sandakan, made Mr. Sinclair gasp in surprise.

A Number of Things
By Charles Hanson Towne

WHEN travelers find themselves in a foreign city, they make haste to visit the museums and art galleries; but when there are in one's native town, years may elapse before we enter them. We feel that we may go at any time, and so we postpone the day. Londoners, I imagine, do not rush to the Tate Gallery or the Wallace Collection; and few of them are interested in the Tower. Parisians do not haunt the Louvre, and Romans are not as curious about the Vatican as we and I would be.

When I was a child I was often taken to our Museum of Natural History, in New York, and I liked to ramble through those spacious corridors and see all the wonders in the huge glass cases. I had not been there for years until one other afternoon. What struck me immediately was the number of school children I saw being conducted by their teachers to this room and that. Girls were busy making notes, and boys, with eyes popping from their heads, were thrilled at the Indian Room, filled with authentic records of a vanishing race. Lectures were going on, the marvells were being explained, all free of charge.

The Jumbo collection of trees of North America attracted considerable interest. I went to California, to appreciate the vast trees that grow there, for here are well-preserved specimens to astonish and amaze us. The Foresty Hall is filled with wonderful things. Strange growths beneath the sea have been gathered here, in beautiful fashion, and the Hall of Ocean Life is marvelous. The antiquities of Mexico and Central America are on view, there is a Chinese and Siberian collection that is positively thrilling, and all the insect and reptile life of the world is on display in an extraordinary way.

Additions are constantly being made to all the collections; and now the news is that the plane in which Lindbergh made his voyage of 30,000 miles is to be given to the museum, and will be installed in the Hall of Ocean Life in time. Hordes will go to see it, but they should not neglect the other exhibits.

THE other day I received a letter from a Polish gentleman in Chicago, in which he said: "I wish to draw your attention to the fact that the world premiere of Bernard Shaw's 'On the Road' took place a little while ago in Warsaw, and that his previous play, 'The Apostles' was first produced in the Polish Theatre in Warsaw, because of the circumstances of the world is in a state of confusion, and that theatre has the best actors in the world."

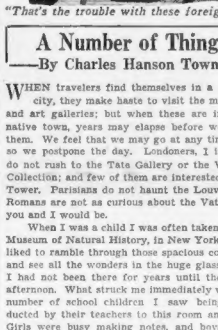

"If I ever live to see the world, please do not miss Poland, where lists of hundreds of people are waiting throughout the night to secure tickets for some opera or play, or to hear a prominent opera singer; where literature and the fine arts are the daily bread of the average man."

"I am surprised to see how little interest Poland now receives here. I have been looking in any of the Chicago dailies regarding Shaw's 'Crusaders,' shows here in Polish Theatre several weeks ago, although it was played with exceptional piety and reverence by some Polish actors and was acclaimed by the local Polish press."

I know very little about Poland, and so the next day my book came to me from Poland's "Poland: Past and Present," by Stefan Karol, I opened it with unusual interest, and made some interesting discoveries. Poland I learned suffered from the devastations of the World War of 1914-1918, and was one of the most devastated of nations. The Polish invasion which followed, in 1920, devastated large areas in the eastern part of Poland, more than 200,000 people and a half buildings were destroyed.

Simultaneous were the problems of adjusting a common administration for a territory which for nearly a century and a half had been governed by three different rulers, and which was to be restored to what had been destroyed. This was done within the space of four years' time.

And so, I think, I have a right to say in Chicago has reason to be proud of his native land.

Some Thoughts on Murder
By Gelett Burgess

A BIG murder story takes precedence in most newspapers over politics and sport or food and fire, fashion and international imbroglio. Only actual war can compete in public interest with a first-class mysterious murder.

And why not? The universal excitement over murder is normal to humanity. Psychologists assure, however, that it affords a sort of safety valve for certain deep-seated and dangerous emotions.

The usual objection to the portrayal of crime in the movies and in print is that it encourages violence and excess. But in Italy, since the publication of the crime stories was prohibited, the percentage of criminality has considerably increased.

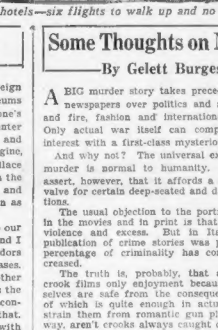

The truth is, probably, that adults find in crime films only enjoyment because they themselves are safe from the consequences the fear of which is quite enough by actual life to restrain them from romantic gun play. And if you were, aren't crooks always caught on the screen?

WITH every real murder case, though many consider it a drawn action into the drama and art galleries; but when there are in one's native town, years may elapse before we enter them. We feel that we may go at any time, and so we postpone the day. Londoners, I imagine, do not rush to the Tate Gallery or the Wallace Collection; and few of them are interested in the Tower. THE amateur sleuth who discovered Voltaire after his flight and notified the police became almost as important as the murderer himself. The wailer who served her an hour just before she was arrested had to answer thousands of questions and receive a fortune in tips. In fact, I myself narrowly escaped becoming a nine-day celebrity. I, too, was at the Cafe Brune—only it was the night before. If I had laid eyes on Voltaire or even said I had I might have had all the free drinks I cared to accept at the Cafe Brune.

All sorts of excitable individuals always try to butt into the cast of a big murder drama. I was at the Cafe Brune when Voltaire was arrested. I wrote letters to the police, they ran from one editorial office to another to tell their woolly tales and get their pictures into the papers.

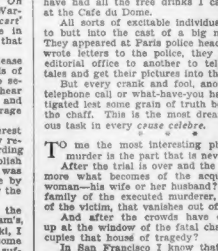

But every crank and fool, anonymous letter, secure tickets for some opera or play, or to hear a prominent opera singer; where literature and the fine arts are the daily bread of the average man."

Vagabondia
By Bruno Lesing

ROME—Friends, Romans and countrymen—lend me your ears: I have made a startling discovery. (Give the drums a rattle, Goldbugs.)

Do you remember the story of the rape of the Sabine? The form in which it has come down to us in the story in the "History of the World," written by Titus Livius—we call him Livy today—just 1934 years ago. It happened in the time of Romulus.

"And now the Roman state was become so powerful," wrote Livy, "that it was a match for any of the neighboring nations in war; but from the paucity of women its greatness could only last for one age of man; for they had no hope of issue at home, nor had they any intermarriages with their neighbors."

To remedy this, Romulus undertook some match-making on a gigantic scale, but failed. The other nations were suspicious of the Romans and afraid of them and despised them. So, after a while, Romulus got up a great festival, with games and combats—no admission charged—and invited all his neighbors to be his guests. The Sabines came in great numbers, bringing their wives and children. At a given signal the Roman lads dashed into the crowd, grabbed the best-looking girls and carried them off.

How They Made Good

OF course there was a great scandal and talk about violating the laws of hospitality, but as only the Romans were armed with swords, the Sabines were obliged to smooth things over, made a pledge that every man would marry the girl he had taken and support her for life. And that was done. Good feeling prevailed again, and not many years later the Sabines were united. And lived happily together ever afterward.

And now, list, list, O list! Here's Sir Thomas Cato Westford, M.A., LL.D., a famous British scholar, a philosopher and an old man who has spent years studying the origin of ancient races. And he says: "The Sabines were a plebeian race."

No it or but. A flat statement which he has made recently in a play about the "History of the Vestal Virgins of Rome," published by H. K. Mulford, Jr., New York, as nearly all Romans were descended from the consolidation of those two nations, and as the Goths and Gauls intermingled and intermarried with the Romans, and as most of the population is descended from the Romano-Gothic-Gaulic mixture, who can be sure that his ancestors had not a drop of Semitic blood in their veins?

And anyone who FEELS sure ought to be able to account for those wild tribes or for the great wars of the Sabines, and were never heard of again.

Tip on Contentment

TO change the subject, Glancing through "The Messenger," a lively local newspaper, I was rather surprised to find a column and a half devoted to the fountain of Trevi. This fountain has been here for two thousand years, and it is the same, itself and is so familiar to the Romans that they pay no attention to it. I wonder what the fountain has done for the place but this late date, so much space in a busy newspaper. I began to plough through it and on one service I came to a place which caught the spirit of it and exclaimed, "Hoary!"

The fountain is a monument to the monotonous of habitual things." And the phrase was "tranquillity of the soul." The writer went on to say that it was a monument to us, amid congenial and even beautiful surroundings where we can find contentment. It is a monument to the place and turbulent life whose only advantages are to emphasize the pleasures we abandoned.

Business compels some of us to leave our favorite spots and go to some congenial places. The Wanderlust gets into the blood of some of us and we feel we must hit the Roman way of life, and then there are some of us who really have no good reason to leave the place but feel we may go insane if we cannot get away FROM where we are. Well, I've had it all three years. And when I've been in a place for some time I invariably wish for some other else. I miss tranquillity of the soul. That's something which time-tales and guide books do not give you. I come here, get a thrill out of the Fountain of Trevi and then, like the Romans, weary of it. I cannot look at it every day. Rome fills me they could like to see the Empire State Building. I'm sure they will get a thrill out of it. I'm weary of it as soon as they are used to it.

Cook Has This Answer

ALL of which doesn't get anyone anywhere, I suppose it's the only thing in human nature that cannot be helped. But, in the words of "There's one galoot I'd like to shoot—"

And that's the guy who goes meowing about the world, lamenting his little home in Rome and his little home in Rome, where the wheat absorbs the gold of the sun. Why in the dickens doesn't he go back there and eat it?

Fallen Stars

ONE moonless night some little stars were gambling about. The cloudless asphodel of the skies. What all of them were doing was to be seen. And people in the streets below were looking up at the stars. A scintillating shower: "Oh, see. The falling stars!" they said.

They fell so far and fast and hard that they were like a great rain. And then were buried in the ground. By several earthquake shocks; Tears were shed by the Romans. And laid the granite base With pick and shovel, and they found A bed of diamonds.

CHESTER MORRIS AND ALISON LOYD IN "OLD DEAL"

THE SCORCH KISS AND BUNNYING OF YESTERDAY'S FILM LIFE SEEMS TO BE PAST. IT MAY BE A NEW DEAL. BUT IT WILL BE A COLD DEAL.—Claire Trevor

CLAIRE TREVOR GIVES A KISS TALK
Since you mention it, Miss Trevor, we haven't seen so much of what you call "scorch kissing" in the movies of late. In New York, Claire Trevor, prophesied the passage of the "sizzling equatorial kissing scene," as you see enacted by Chester Morris and Alison Loyd.

Hollywood, Jan. 31 (INS)—A kiss is a kiss in any man's language at any time.
The technique of love making has changed very little since Coppairs "barged up" to Marc Anthony and crowned a torch song. So says Gordon Westcott—of the Utah Westcotts—tall and handsome young actor who achieved fame on the London stage and returned to Hollywood to make screen love to Ruth Chatterton, Sylvia Sydney, Betty Blane, Tallulah, Buckhead, Bebe Daniels, Bette Davis, Joan Blondell and other lovely ladies.
Westcott today took issue with Claire Trevor, 31, blonde movie starlet, who said in New York that the "new deal" in movie love making tended to eliminate "humanitarian, cave-man-in-courtlips."
"The scorch kiss and bunnying of yesterday's film days seem to be past," murmured Claire, who prophesied the passage of "sizzling equatorial kissing scenes."

GARBO RETURNS AS SPINSTER

Hollywood, Jan. 31 (INS)—Greta Garbo, glamorous Swedish motion picture star, has not gone to the altar.

The authority for this statement today was Rouben Mamoulian, farcical director, who accompanied the motion picture star on a "hite and seek" vacation in Arizona. Mamoulian returned to his home here today and said that Miss Garbo also was back home. He declined to say when they had returned, but was emphatic in declaring there had been no wedding.

"We are not married," he declared. "Have you any plans for marriage?" he was asked.

"I have no plans at all," he replied.

"We went to Arizona on a vacation trip and were interested in seeing as much of the scenery as possible," the director said. "Did the publicity attendant to your recognition cause you to cut short your vacation?" he was asked.

"Well, I wouldn't say that," he replied. "We had planned to return approximately when we did."

Licks Hand That Saved Him

A little Kerry Blue terrier scampered over the ice of Muddy River, Back Bay, bound for any place his nose might lead him. But it played a prank and suddenly let him fall through a hole where his curiosity was promptly chilled. With his head above water and his forepaws striving valiantly to grip the ice, he gave vent to his dismay with yelps. They attracted the desired attention and attendants of the Animal Rescue League responded. Using a ladder they hauled him out. And was he pleased! He showered caresses upon his rescuers, including John Bella, and showed his gratitude more plainly than any words could have done. (Boston American photo).

KILLER'S GIRL IS MISSING

Uncertain whether the girl has been kidnaped or has left home of her own accord, East Boston police today began a search for Rosa Santenista, 35, of 404 Meridian st. Her absence was reported by her father, Michael Santenista.

Ever since he shot down two men in his most market last February in an alleged "shakedown" attempt, the man has been marked for revenge by friends of the dead pair, Pasquale Ciccarilli and John Biscardi, both formerly of East Boston.

Shortly after he was exonerated of all guilt in the double shooting, he was made the target of shotgun bandits in Easton st., East Boston. After that he went to Italy, returning only a few weeks ago.

Police admitted that his daughter might have been kidnaped out of revenge, but were inclined to think that there was some other reason for her absence.

ARRESTS, REMOVAL OF ALL POLICE FROM POLITICS

92 PERCENT CWA
WANTED TO GET JOBS BACK
Bartlett Interceded for Workers at City
Hall

CWA "white collar" workers stormed the office of Adm. Joseph W. Bartlett today protesting their discharge at the Boston tax collector's office yesterday, and arguing that employment of 92 men for 44 jobs was to blame.

It was announced that 92 discharged men will be re-employed. City Adm. Walter W. McCarthy is to meet a committee representing these men.

A delegation told Bartlett that 92 were fired, and the only reason for it was the $12500 to hire twice as many men as were called for.

They further argued that this method cut of skilled artisans and other workers to $13 a week, when they were supposed to get from $18 to $24. All said they wanted work.

LABOR NAMES AID
They were told that McCarthy had announced earlier that he would see their committee and that all would be given their jobs back, with extra time to make up for days lost.

They nominated the man who will sit as a liaison officer on the CWA administrative board and the name was sent to Washington today for approval. The appointee's name was not made public.

This selection of a labor representative was hailed as a great victory today. Labor men had protested that because there was no representative unskilled men were given skilled workers' jobs.

PAY GIVEN TO 600
While the CWA is still in running down alleged forgeries, 600 men were given $1000 each. CWA jobs seemed to have been given to the men.

Complainants who alleged that the CWA was in the city's financial department took their charges to U. S. Atty Francis F. W. Ford today.

Mouse Lives Up to Fable in Flames

A mouse which not only ran up the proverbial clock, but all around it, died in a fire which broke out in the filling station owned by William O'Brien, 98 Adams at Quincy.

The fire was discovered at its birth by passing motorists who sounded an alarm and then rushed to the second floor of the wooden building. Mrs. Patricia O'Brien and her daughter, Lillian, and a young boy, were led to safety.

The mouse, which was seen on the outside of the filling station and smashed the glass. Out popped the mouse, and escaped without as much as a "hickory, dickory dock" in thanks.

SHEEP WINNERS IN EUROPE

Julius Kreuzer, chief chemist and superintendent of a South End distillery, is somewhere in Europe to win $100,000 prize money.

He arrived at Dublin yesterday and had no trouble in collecting his winnings. He expressed pleasure at the fact that the money was in his hands one hour after his arrival in the city.

After collecting the money he visited the Lord Mayor, who asked him to convey his good will to the thousands of Irishmen exiled in Britain.

He left the city late in the day without making his destination known. However, before leaving this country he revealed that he planned to spend some time in travel through England, France and Germany.

On his return to this country he will be met by his family and returned to work.

He will have won $40,000 of the federal government, while the state will collect $6000 of his winnings.

STAMMING HIT BY NEW CODE FOR TRAFFIC

Only One Face and Film Supervisor Banned It

By FENNY DOYLE
There's a girl by the name of Ruth Weston in town. And if you were asking me to tell you that there are "Don Madsen" like her at the Plymouth Theater and very few elsewhere. She has made a name for herself as a black mamba (the world's most poisonous snake) in Port Elizabeth, she has tamed unquestioned "lion" in Park and drawing rooms, shot tigers in Africa, but she hasn't got what it takes to address a room full of quiet clubmen.

ALWAYS IN THE LEAD
On or about Ruth, But despite the fact that she is the only woman in the club of Boston today in a town where ex-Madame Curie has made a name for herself as a black mamba, she is not a lioness. Ladies and men, here's someone you'd like to see.

Last night, Miss Weston, who has a marvelous part in one of the best plays of the season on Boston's stage, commenced her twenty-second week in the theater. You'd think you'd be in luck.

There's a reason for this. There's a reason for this. There's a reason for this. There's a reason for this. There's a reason for this.

LIFE OBS FOR OFFICERS IS FOREOED

Legislature Asked to Pass Plan for Crime Council

Removal of all police from politics is urged by Atty-Gen. Joseph E. Barker in his annual report, filed with the Legislature today.

He recommended that all police officers be appointed for life, or put automatically under civil service, subject to removal and disqualification for any further public service upon findings by a judge of competency, incompetence or infidelity.

Warner, further recommended that all heads of public police agencies comprise a "grand council of police."

He declared no existing agency could cope with such a series of "crimes" as have occurred in the daytime the past four months. Many of these crimes, he said, are without cause.

Here are the crimes that the attorney-general referred to which broke out within the last 12 months:

PLAN FOR FIXING PRICES BEING TRIED

White Lead Makers Place Goods Only on Consignment

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor, Boston American.
Last year's attempt to fix prices for white lead products has been a failure. The white lead makers have come out with a plan that looks promising, but it is still too early to say whether it will succeed.

Another advantage of selling on consignment appears in the event of a price advance. The white lead makers are returning to the manufacturers the cost of the goods, and the manufacturers are returning to the white lead makers the cost of the goods.

HIGHER PRICES ARE RECORDED BY LEADERS

New York, Jan. 17—Higher prices were recorded by numerous leaders in late trading on the New York Stock Exchange today. Speciality buying came into the market and numerous groups experienced periodic flurries.

Trading maintained an active pace and advances in the late dealings ranged up to around 3 points. Narrow movements, however, persisted in a number of leaders, including U. S. Steel, American Telephone and General Motors.

The last hour saw Case, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Union Pacific, Western Union and Armour of Illinois preferred up 2 to around 3.

With inflationary psychology apparently indecisive as a result of the administration's steps toward dollar stabilization, both traders and investors were beginning to study the position of stocks of companies which may be expected to benefit by the government's huge spending program. Earnings, both current and potential, were being analyzed for clients by the various

COOK-COOS

BY TED COOK

In gratitude for her honest payment of her debts, a proposal has been made that parties of American college students be induced to visit Finland next summer.

It might be a nice tribute to Finland to induce the traveling collegians to continue visiting France. In fact, if American collegians had stayed out of Paris as they have stayed out of Finland, France might not do us like she do.

CURRENT EVENTS

The birds that gather occasionally at Boy Wright's feed barn are always thinking up new stunts to pull on Clyde Lawson. The other evening, when Clyde entered his lonely quarters alone perhaps toward midnight when he turned on the light, sitting there on a pile of furniture was a big blinking owl. Well, Clyde said to himself, he's at least a damnable better company than any of that bunch that brought him here.

Observes Genesieve, the kitchen cynic: "To hear some Congressmen talk, you'd think this country was going like a house afire till the professors came along."

The gal who wears a flannel nightgown seldom turns out slightly.

Footloose Johnson says "the more speeches I make the wetter the country becomes."

And the wetter the country becomes the more speeches everybody will make.
